Fiction

Fiction
F 1	Push Sapphire. Vintage Books: New York, NY 1997	Claireece Precious Jones endures unimaginable hardships in her young life. Abused by her mother, raped by her father, she grows up poor, angry, illiterate, fat, unloved and generally unnoticed. So what better way to learn about her than through her own, halting dialect? That is the device deployed in the first novel by poet and singer Sapphire. An intense story of adversity and the mechanisms to cope with it.

AB 11	Child Lures: What Every Parent and Child Should Know About Preventing Sexual Abuse and Abduction Kenneth Wooden. Summit publishing Group: Arlington, TX 1995	Kenneth Wooden starts by giving instructions on how to use the book and follows that with a description of a molester. Wooden's research included hundreds of interviews with convicted child molesters incarcerated around the country. He then designates one chapter to each of 15 lures used by molesters, citing how to recognize and avoid them, and ending with simple practice scenarios for parents and kids to try at home. The book is meant to be a guide for parents and children to read together. For this reason half the book is designed for children. The parts aimed at children are shaded and written at a 2nd grade level. If this is too advanced for your children, don't worry, they should have no trouble understanding the concepts if it is read to them. The half of the book designated for children is written to warn and educate but not frighten them unnecessarily. Throughout the book Wooden continually reassures kids that most adults would never hurt them. On the other hand the parent's guide is morbidly descriptive, citing actual cases where serial killers used these lures to hook victims. For that reason some parents might feel the need to censor their portion of this book.
AB 12	Danger in the House: Keesha's Story Cleveland Department of Public Health April 96	A flip book story of Keesha, a pregnant woman who is in an abusive relationship.
AB 13	Ten Talks Parents Must Have With Their Children About Violence , Dominic Cappello. Hyperion Trade Paperback, 2000	Ten Talks offers parents the help they need to talk to their children. This resourceful and illustrated book outlines a series of ten easy to manage and engaging talks, including real-life scenarios to which every child can relate. It will actually tell you how to begin the talk, what to say, and how to respond. Ten Talks covers violence in schools, the internet, the neighborhood, and many others.

AP 21	The Evaluation of Abstinence Education Programs Funded Under Title V Section 510: Interim Report	Gives the background of Title V Section 510 Abstinence Education Programs, early implementation experiences, and the foundation for assessing these programs. 2002.
AP 22	Kids Having Kids: A Special Report on the Costs of Adolescent Childbearing	This report was prepared for the Robin Hood Foundation under its grant to the Catalyst Institute to organize and oversee a unique research project to further our understanding of the consequences of adolescent childbearing for adolescent mothers, for their children, for the fathers of their children, and for the nation. The Catalyst Institute commissioned outstanding scholars to undertake independent research on various aspects of this issue. So, too, they commissioned me to prepare this synthesis of the scholars' research. All of us working on this project have been encouraged to express our own judgments freely, which we have done. Therefore, neither this report nor the supporting research by the project scholars necessarily represent the official opinion or policy of the Robin Hood Foundation or of the Catalyst Institute. Rebecca A. Maynard, Editor
AP 23	Power in Numbers: Peer Effects on Adolescent Girls' Sexual Debut and Pregnancy The Robin Hood Foundation April 1999	This report, by Peter Bearman and Hannah Brückner, provides extensive analysis of data from a large national survey of American adolescent girls on the effect of peer influence on the timing of girls' first sexual intercourse and on girls' pregnancy risk. Their surprising findings, which also form the basis of Chapter 1 of another Campaign publication, Peer Potential: Making the Most of How Teens Influence Each Other , greatly contribute to the understanding of exactly how peer influence works.
AP 24	What About Teens? National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy	The results of teen focus group testing reveal teens' attitudes and beliefs about teen pregnancy, their reasons for engaging in sexual activity, and their reasons for delaying sex, among other things. April 1999.

FA 4	Involving Males in Preventing Teen Pregnancy: A Guide for Program Planners	The guide, funded by a grant from The California Wellness Foundation to inform its statewide Teen Pregnancy Prevention Initiative, is intended for program planners in California and throughout the country who wish to implement programs involving males in teenage pregnancy prevention. It has three main purposes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • to dispel myths about the target population by providing a description of the male partners of potential teenage mothers, • to identify established pregnancy prevention programs that have successfully involved males in different settings around the country, and • to distill practical lessons from the experiences of these exemplary programs for programs still at the fledgling stage. http://www.urban.org/family/Teenpreg.pdf Urban Institute. 1997.

FA 5	Lost Boys: Why Our Sons Turn Violent and How We Can Save Them James Garbarino, Ph.D. Anchor Books: New York, NY 1999	Garbarino devotes the first part of his book to examining the roots of violence among boys. He traces it to class and race issues, as well as risk factors such as child neglect, parental abandonment, physical and emotional abuse, spiritual emptiness and a culture that legitimizes violence in movies, television and video games. In the second half, he outlines how involved adults might prevent the downward spiral by identifying and treating patterns of aggression early in a boys life, and how providing the proper spiritual, psychological and social anchors can keep a troubled boy from drifting into violence. Garbarino effectively illustrates his points with stories of his own work with violent boys. Solidly researched and written, this book is of equal value to parents, educators, family therapists and other professionals.

This book discusses the father's role during childbirth, different ways a father can interact and bond with his child, discipline, balancing the demands of a job with the needs of a family, and more! Includes additional information for families where both parents work along with updated information on support during childbirth, co-sleeping, and breastfeeding.

FA 7	The Adonis Complex: The Secret Crisis of Male Body Obsession by Harrison G. Pope, May 2000, Simon & Schuster ISBN: 0684869101	Three of the world's leading authorities on men help us understand and combat the frightening set of compulsive behaviors that make up the Adonis Complex. Combining colorful case studies with scientific research, they reveal a threat that is as serious as the beauty myth is for women or anorexia nervosa is for girls. The symptoms of this dangerous body obsession – excessive workouts, steroid abuse, eating disorders, and body and muscle dysmorphic disorder (distorted body perception) – lead to problems with sex and intimacy, relationships, and work. And in teenagers the Adonis Complex can interfere with healthy emotional and physical development. Introducing the first-ever scientifically accurate Body Image Test along with the Adonis Complex Test, these authors offer men and the women who love them – mothers, wives, and girlfriends – a sensible and effective program for change.

HV 20	Promoting GYN CARE for HIV-Infected Women Best Practices from New York State New York State Department of Health AIDS Institute 2000 Edition	This booklet is designed to supply health care practitioners who provide or design health care services for women with HIV/AIDS with practical solutions to the problems of attracting and retaining women in GYN care. This brochure identifies some best practices and creative solutions that have been found to attract and retain women infected with HIV into routine GYN care. They have been culled from a series of face-to-face and telephone interviews with seventeen clinicians and administrators working in hospitals, community health centers, and drug treatment programs. It is hoped that by sharing the insights and perspectives of these successful colleagues, readers will develop and implement similar programs in their facilities. Providers are encouraged to adapt the strategies outlined in this booklet to most effectively meet the needs of different medical settings.

Job Skills and Workforce Issues

JS 1	Beyond Work First: How to Help Hard-to-Employ Individuals Get Jobs and Succeed in the Workplace	Despite a strong economy and the efforts of welfare-to-work and workforce development programs, many welfare-reliant families have not yet made a successful transition to employment, and others who have not been on welfare have difficulties finding jobs. For some of these families, a host of complex problems play a part, including substance abuse, domestic violence, and physical, mental, and learning disabilities. This “how-to” guide presents promising practices for identifying and assisting these hard-to-employ people by distilling information and lessons from relevant research and the experiences of rehabilitation, clinical treatment, and welfare-to-work providers. MA 26	Life on the Screen: Identity in the Age of the Internet Sherry Turkle. Touchstone: New York, NY 1995	Life on the Screen is a balanced and nuanced look at some of the ways that cyberculture helps us comment upon real life (what the cybercrowd sometimes calls RL). Turkle looks at the way various netizens have used the Internet, and especially MUDs (Multi-User Dimensions), to learn more about the possibilities available in apprehending the world. Taking as her motto William James's maxim "Philosophy is the art of imagining alternatives," Turkle shows how playing with gender in cyberspace can shape a person's real-life understanding of gender. Especially telling are the examples of the man who finds it easier to be assertive when playing a woman, because he believes male assertiveness is now frowned upon while female assertiveness is considered hip, and the woman who has the opposite response, believing that it is easier to be aggressive when she plays a male, because as a woman she would be considered "bitchy." Without taking sides, Turkle points out how both have expanded their emotional range. Other topics, such as artificial life, receive an equally calm and sage response, and the first-person accounts from many Internet users provide compelling reading and good source material for readers to draw their own conclusions.

PA 20	The Black Parenting Book: Caring for Our Children in the First Five Years	Combines medical know-how and expert parenting advice with perspectives unique to African American parenting. Black kids are more at-risk than white kids in matters such as obesity (more than 25 percent of black children are obese), asthma, death from falls, inadvertent poisoning, and loss of self-esteem, and The Black Parenting Book deals with these issues as well as covering the basics of baby and child care (feeding, sleeping, skin, hair, bathing, toilet training). The authors raise and answer questions such as “How can I find a pediatrician who shares my values?” “Are all-black preschools best?” and “Should I straighten my child’s hair?” The authors help parents prepare their children for the pain of racism, handle racist incidents, select a preschool, give support to their children during stressful times (divorce, death, moving), deal with discipline without spanking, and support spirituality and family traditions. The book handles these issues—and far more—with sensibility and sensitivity. —Ericka Lutz Beal, Anne C., MD, MPH, Broadway Books. New York, NY. 1999.

W 5	The Girl Pages: A Handbook of the Best Resources for Strong, Confident, Creative Girls Milholland, Charlotte. Hyperion: New York, NY 1998	Milholland presents a thorough, easy-to-use tool filled with options to enrich girls' lives: camps, programs, resources, associations, you name it, plus annotated lists of books, web sites, movies, and periodicals. Her goal is to help girls be creative and confident, and she succeeds well. A founder of the Girls Movement, she has assembled a wide range of information that gives access to thousands of opportunities to help girls move into womanhood, covering all aspects of the humanities and sciences, plus sports and the outdoors. Annotations include phone numbers, web sites, and locations but not cost.
W 6	Slut! Growing Up Female with as Bad Reputation Leora Tanenbaum. Perennial: New York, NY 2000	The 50 women interviewed for this book differ greatly in ethnic background, age, and economic status, but they share one thing in common—each of them, along with Tanenbaum herself, was labeled a “slut” in junior high or high school. As such, they became victims of a double standard that winks at sexual promiscuity among teenage boys but insists that young women remain virginal and pure. Even worse, the slut bashing is perpetuated in nearly every case by female classmates. In addition to insisting that schools get serious about combating sexual harassment, Tanenbaum urges the development of sex education programs that acknowledge responsible alternatives to abstinence, programs that would recognize the sexual desires of young women (and men) without condemnation. Her social critique is solid, but it's the personal accounts of emotional abuse—and, thankfully, perseverance—that will thoroughly convince you that the current tolerance of slut bashing is simply unacceptable. —Ron Hogan

W 7	Deal with It! A Whole New Approach to Your Body, Brain, and Life as a Gurl Esther Drill. Pocket Books: New York, NY 1999	Drill, McDonald and Odes have translated their highly popular Web site, gURL.com, into print, taking a holistic approach to those perennial teen concerns: changing bodies, emotions, desires and lives. In a frank, nonjudgmental tone, they discuss topics and details that more conservative guides might skip: lesbianism and bisexuality receive respectful and thorough treatment that is remarkably well-integrated into the broader discussion of sex in this happily nonphallogentric book; the section on illegal drugs is evenhanded; and the discussion of treatments of eating disorders, other mental illnesses and suicide are honest and informative. Each section ends with a comprehensive list of topical resources: Web sites, hot lines, books and organizations. In addition to the authors' valuable commentary, a good deal of the text is made up of outtakes from girls' online dialogues culled from the site, revealing a thoughtful and supportive cybercommunity able to respond unflinchingly to the many issues covered. Young readers, liberal parents and educators will welcome the authors' openness and lack of boosterism. Full-color illustrations throughout. FD 61	America's Children: Key National Indicators of Well-Being 2003 Forum on Child and Family Statistics 2003	America's Children: Key National Indicators of Well-Being, 2003 is the seventh report in an annual series prepared by the Forum agencies. As in past years, readers will find here an accessible compendium of indicators—drawn from the most reliable official statistics—illustrative of both the promises and the difficulties confronting our Nation's young people. The report presents 25 key indicators on important aspects of children's lives. These indicators are easy to understand by broad audiences, objectively based on substantial research connecting them to reliable data on child well-being, balanced so that no single area of children's lives dominates the report, measured regularly so that they can be updated to show trends over time, and representative of large segments of the population rather than one particular group. The report also presents data on nine contextual measures that describe changes in the characteristics of the population as well as in children's family settings and living arrangements.
